

The blood taker will tell you before they put the needle in your arm.

You may feel a scratch. The blood taker takes some blood.

The blood taker
removes the band
from your arm.

The blood taker
removes the needle
from your arm.

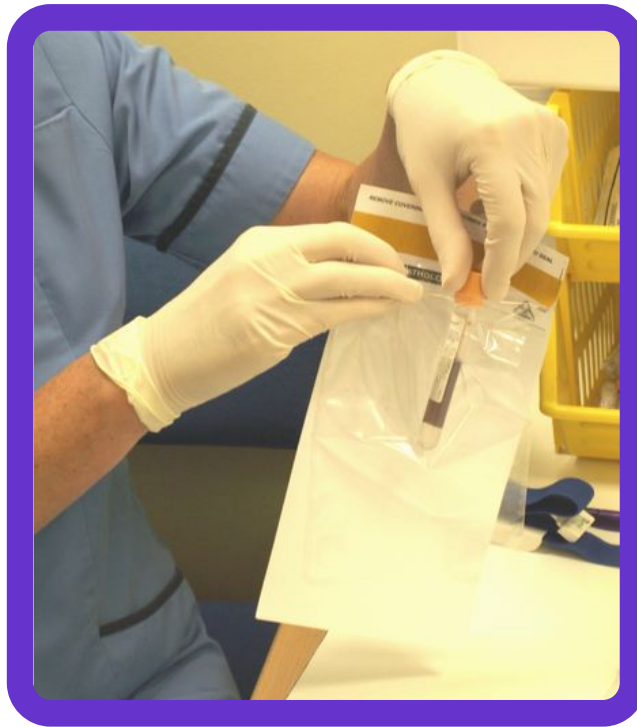

You hold a piece of cotton wool on your arm.

The blood taker
may tape the cotton
wool to your arm or use a plaster.

The blood taker
puts your blood
sample in a bag.

The blood test is finished.

What happens next?

Someone looks at your blood.

Someone will write to your doctor.

Your doctor will talk to you about your blood test.

